Supporting the United States Navy

The Need

With the deployment of its forces world-wide in high-risk, combat and mission-critical locations, Navy operations needed to provide CONUS and OCONUS-based tactical security, survival, and anti-terrorism courses to their forces. The tactical training required expertise in program management, curriculum development, course management and oversight, facility management, support for both executive and administrative areas and the requirement for both classroom and field instruction.

The Solution

Chosen by the Navy for their proven experience and expertise in providing high-risk courses of instruction, DMS was, once again, able to provide the expertise and experience to meet the Navy's requirements. DMS personnel provide Anti-Terrorism/Force Protection (AT/FP) training to the department of the Navy, with services that encompass their specific requirements for program management, curriculum development course management, administrative and executive support, as well as the classroom and field instruction in a high-risk environment. These training courses are provided by DMS at multiple CONUS and OCONUS locations. The DMS provided courses include the Riverine Training Continuum; Small Arms Marksmanship Instructor (SAMI); Survival, Evasion, Resistance, and Escape (SERE); Expeditionary Combat Skills (ECS); Anti-Terrorism (AT) Leadership; and Law Enforcement and Corrections.

The Benefit

With the help of DMS, the Navy will provide the very finest training tools to their forces to prepare them for survival, evasion, resistance and escape, anti-terrorism and riverine combat operations; ensuring optimal survivability in deployed, operational environments.
